

New Generations... ...still breeding on

“Wallaloo Park 422 has been an outstanding success over ‘The GP - Desmond line of genetics. He has been another influential sire used with success by many studs around the country.”

(Top): 2019 Australian Sheepbreeders Association National March Shorn Pair. The ram and ewe are both by Wallaloo Park 422 out of Desmond ewes.

WIL D30 – a Son of Desmond – was selected as a sire because of his extreme fleece weight. 170% against his peers. He is a long bodied tall ram with a straight top-line and good legs and feet placement. Had we not had the fleece weight measurements I might of down-graded him. He also had a 10cm heavy scur but despite this he has bred a good % of PP rams.

He was entered in the 2018 MLP Merino Lifetime Project at Trangie. He performed well above average for measured traits and was by far the outstanding sire in the visual classing ‘Tops to Culls ratio’. Classed by Chris Bowman and Bill Walker ‘Classing Classics’ S.A.

A Fourth Generation

WIL 001 – son of D30 – is a very correct ram and a Double Poll with a very heavy skin with a particularly well-nourished wool. He was entered in the 2018 MLP at Trangie. Overall a top sire being the only one to reach five top 10% results in the ASBV corrected data Flock Breeding Values results. An outstanding achievement under very tough conditions.

Selecting an Outside Sire - how it was done

With a large number of breeding ewes bred from ‘The GP’ and ‘Desmond’ there was a growing need for an outside sire. My offsider Peter Jeffs, whom I employed for his knowledge and sheep skills, and I were at Hamilton Sheepvention in 2017. Along with my brother Graham and his son Alistair we went around inspecting the rams on display. We came up with the unanimous decision that Wallaloo Park 422 was the ram. We inspected the ram, cast our eye over the raw data and decided yes, he is the one. He has been an outstanding success over the GP – Desmond line of genetics. He has been another influential sire used with success by many studs around the country.
